The Queen have seen

Dr. Philip Beth, Vice-President for Student Life, is thoroughly confident that there is a considerable growth of marijuana at PLU. In fact, he has been told that a majority of the students are using it. Speed is used to keep the party going, and functioning when they are "all-out." When does the body come down, the high fades away, and the feeling of depression starts to set in, Dr. Beth believes that it is due to overuse and not to the drug itself.

Supply and demand

In the case of drugs, quantity supplied does not always equal quantity demanded. Those who sought out to free students from the "saddling" of drugs, often found that the demand was too great for the supply. "The problem is not just the drug," says Dr. Beth, "but the amount of demand for it."

What drugs are available to you, are most frequently obtained?

First of all, there is the marijuana that is available in various forms and at various prices. Speed is used to keep the party going, and when it doesn't work, the user goes back for more. Speed is a hard drug to get ahold of, but once you have it, you can use it as often as you like.

How do you purchase it?

Drug dealers are usually found in areas where there is a high demand for drugs. Sometimes, they will be found in the student union, or in the dormitories. They will usually sell the drugs in small quantities at high prices, but if you are willing to pay, you can get your hands on them.

Dr. Beth believes that the demand for drugs is increasing, and that the supply is not keeping up with the demand. He is concerned about the increasing use of drugs among students, and is working to find ways to reduce the demand for them.

What about the problem of put on campus?

All problems related to drug use are being handled by the administration. They are working on a plan to reduce the demand for drugs, and to increase the supply. They are also working on ways to reduce the use of drugs among students. They believe that if they can get the students to understand the dangers of drug use, they can reduce the demand for them.

Anonymous

Anonymous, a student at PLU, has been using drugs for several years. She says that the demand is increasing, and that the supply is not keeping up with the demand. She believes that the administration is doing a good job of handling the problem, and that they are working hard to reduce the demand for drugs.

University policy

"There are no options for a bad resident or assistant, but when it comes to drugs in the dorm," explained Dr. King, head of the Department of Student Affairs, "the decision must be made on the basis of the student's need."

Dean Beall is aware of some students who have experimented with drugs and that, a drug problem exists. Although it is difficult to measure the seriousness of the drug problem here, he feels that, if even one student has a personal drug problem, this constitutes a drug problem at PLU.

Problems?

One student cited PLU's image as a quasi-religious Christian university as possibly positive for the University's approach to the drug problem. "PLU does everything possible to keep the police out of the picture," he said, "but give PLU a bad name, PLU doesn't want to be associated with drugs in the public mind."

The drug problem on our campus seems to be very real. You see, it depends on who you are talking to and how they would define the problem."

Some members of the university community will admit to a slight problem, but go on to say that the danger is not as great as some students might think.
